

EXHIBIT ORGANIZATION

No matter the shape or size of your Exhibit, you should think about dividing up the space in the Exhibit into sections. Sections will help to:

- Organize your information. It will be easier for your viewer to follow along.
- Help you to talk about what happened before, during, and after the main events of your topic.

This is an example of how you might divide up the space on a tri-fold exhibit board.

- Who was involved or affected?
- Where did it happen?

Short-Term Impact or Right After the Event

- What are some things that happened or changed right away?
- Think about positive and negative changes.
- How did this event impact different groups of people?
- What were the reactions to the event? Be sure to think about different points of view.

Long-Term Impact or Long After the Event

- Why is your topic important in history?

PLANNING YOUR EXHIBIT

Use the blank Exhibit Map to plan out what you want to include in your project.

- Step 1: Start with the Heart of the Story and describe what happened..
- Step 2: Next, think about what happened right before the event. What sparked the main events of your topic?
- Step 3: Set your topic into larger historical context. What background information does your reader need to know?
- Step 4: In this step, think about what happened right after the main event - the short-term impact. What were the reactions to it?
- Step 5: Lastly, think about the legacy, or long-term impact of your topic.
